TEACHING CHILDREN TO HEAR, TO LISTEN AND TO SPEAK: A WORKSHOP ON THE AUDITORY-VERBAL APPROACH

Creating Educational Opportunities for Children and their Families where children are encouraged to achieve more!

Ellen Rhoades, ED. S., CED, Certified Auditory Verbal Therapist provides a 3-day workshop for professionals and parents serving children with hearing losses in public educational school placements.

This course is designed to educate participants in becoming positive agents of change toward facilitating the assimilation of young deaf children into our normally hearing communities.

Graduate credit will be offered through the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee's Outreach program for interested participants.

AUGUST 16-18, 2004
Waukesha, Wisconsin

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is designed for early intervention service providers, teachers of deaf children, speech and language therapists, and audiologists providing services to young children with hearing loss. The course includes the understanding of the seven management components necessary for this approach to be effective so that deaf children can learn to hear, listen, and speak.

1. Participants will understand how the A-V approach differs from other communication options
2. Participants will review current research findings on the A-V approach
3. Understand the four basic developmental levels of the A-V "road map" including application of therapeutic intervention

All students enrolled will participate in analyses and critiquing of therapy. Students will participate in verbal discussions on theory.

ELLEN RHOADES, CERT. AVT

Ellen provides auditory-verbal training for professionals and is engaged in ongoing research as well as family consultations. Ellen founded an A-V center, established three A-V programs and has directed a nonprofit A-V center for 25 years. She is a founding member of AVI Inc., previously served on AG Bell's board of directors and publishes in a variety of journals.

Please consider joining us this summer as we work with families helping children learn to hear, to listen, and to speak!
